Record-Breaking Aquatics Season in Glendale. Glendale's dedication to educating its residents on important safety issues along with its longstanding commitment to working with valued community partners has resulted in a 14 percent increase in participation in the city's various aquatics programs this past summer. More than 80,000 people used the city's pools for lessons, safety training or recreational swim.

The city's aquatics programs are not just fun and a way to stay cool during Arizona's hot summers; they provide important safety lessons too. Preventing drowning is an important message year round, and Glendale's swimming lessons not only teach children how to swim but also emphasize important safety measures for being in and around water.

In addition to the preventative measures from the city's aquatics programs, the Glendale Fire Department conducted several water safety events including neighborhood walks and a water safety day at Rose Lane Aquatics Center offering residents free swimming, safety information and a mock drowning demonstration.

Adding to the outreach efforts, Southwest Ambulance donated $5,000 to provide free lessons to young swimmers at Glendale pools.

Glendale's swimming season finished with the following participation levels:

- Private swimming lessons: 374
- Group swimming lessons: 3,037
- Junior lifeguards mentored: 47
- Water aerobics: 1,453
- Recreational swim: 77,527
